Dale Husband
October 2, 2017 ·

Coming out as what I call "semi-bisexual" (my new partner is genderqueer, meaning he does not conform to gender binary standards at all) has been the most liberating experience of my life....which is odd considering I never felt oppressed as a strictly heterosexual person. But at least I have a new understanding of why GAY, LESBIAN, and TRANS LIVES MATTER. Don't ever ask me to give up the happiness I now have in my life.....that's as cruel as asking me to shoot myself!

26 7 comments

Like Comment Share

Most relevant

Larry Ludwick
Congrats, Dale. I am so happy to hear of YOUR happiness. Love is love and there should be no more that comes out of people's mouths after that. 🙂

Like Reply 5y

Robert Montes
Good for you! I consider myself a mixture of male and female characteristics myself so I know how it is. For me I look more androgynous according to most people which is why gay men don't want me mostly.

Like Reply 5y

Dale Husband
That's their loss, Robert. I guess people of ALL sexual orientations need to open their hearts and minds more. The worth and dignity of human beings is what matters, not whether you or your lover has the "right" body parts or appearance.

Like Reply 5y

Write a reply...

Sara Munoz Munoz
Are you familiar with the term pansexual? I think it would apply to you. Bisexual implies you are attracted to "both" genders. But you recognize there are more than two genders. Pansexual just means you are attracted to a person regardless of gender. As I've heard it described, "hearts, not parts".
If I'm getting it wrong, please let me know, folks. 😊

Like Reply 5y

Dale Husband
Perhaps when you meet him next Sunday, we can discuss that, Sara Munoz Munoz.

Like Reply 5y

Write a reply...

Ember Herald
Just be happy, Dale. Don't worry about what others have to say. Let them speak their ignorant garbage and don't even give them the time of day with a response. Just keep being you and let yourself be happy in doing so!

Like Reply 5y

Write a comment...